Death of Mrs. R. M. Pitman.

Mrs. Kate Pitman, aged 32, wife of Robt. Pitman, died at her home near Georgetown on Saturday night at 11 o'clock of consumption. Mrs. Pitman left three little children, besides a devoted husband to mourn her untimely demise. In early girlhood she joined the Christian church and all during the years since her life has shed forth the beauties of a Christian character. She was a true friend, a loving wife and an unselfishly self-sacrificing mother. Tender and true, loving and faithful, it is no wonder she won and held the tenderest regard of all who knew her. So the sorrowing husband has the deep sympathy of a wide circle of friends in his deep bereavement. Elder B. W. Trimble will conduct the funeral service at Corinth church, this morning at 9:30 o'clock and the burial will take place in Macpelah cemetery about 11 o'clock.

In the halcyon days of childhood standing by our grandmothers, listening to their stirring tales of pioneer life and border warfare, our interest began in the American Indian. The old black nurse had only to utter the word, "Injuns," to bring the most refractory urchin to terms. With maturer years our interest in this vanishing race has intensified. Whether we study them as the fierce tribes of North America, the more civilized, gentle followers of the kingly Montezuma, or the barbaric splendor of the Incas, they are alike wonderful and mysterious. On the surge of Ontario's billows, in the thunders of Niagara, by mountain vale and river, they have impressed themselves and can not be forgotten.

From whence came they, and what is their destiny? Mr. H. H. Emmett comes to us a representative of this race. He is touchingly impressive by the poetry and pathos of the story of departed glories of those lords of our primeval forests, and "points with laughter and tears" to his own attempts at citizenship. He seemingly paints his pictures in the fantastic shadows and flickering light of the wigwam.

He has tried to pierce the adamant wall, which stands ever between us and their origin, and sadly interprets the "handwriting-on-the-wall" which foretells their hopeless future.

We beg for Mr. Emmett the patronage he deserves for his talents and his unique subject.

There was no Sunday School at the Mission Station on Queen street Sunday evening on account of a developed case of diphtheria which appeared last week. The school will be open again next Sunday unless there be other cases. Prayer meeting as usual Thursday evening.

For a close, clean shave and courteous treatment go to Jack Sharp's. You will find his barber shop at the Commercial Hotel.

PRESBYTERIANISM.

One Hundredth Anniversary of the First Presbyterian Church at Mt. Sterling.

The Presbytery — Synod — Woman's Missionary Society.

On Sunday there were delightful services at the Assembly Presbyterian Church. Early in the morning, long before the hour of preaching, the beautiful audience room was well filled with attentive listeners.

On the platform at 11 o'clock were the venerable Robert Caldwell, of Sharpsburg, once a pastor of this church; Dr. John Worrall, of Danville, and the pastor, Rev. A. J. Arrick.

The instrumental music was artistic and the vocal excellent, the audience joining in with the choir lead by Mr. Aldrich, of Lexington. Miss Ayers, vocal teacher in the High School, this city, sang a beautiful solo, charming the entire audience.

Then the Rev. Caldwell took for his text the last clause of the 28th chapter of Matthew, "Lo, I am with you always." It was a sweet, comforting and practical discourse from a servant of God in his eighty-fourth year. Standing, as it were, on the brink of eternity, near to his heavenly home, retrospectively he spoke as a man of faith in God, rich in experience, sweet, highly enjoyed, and are but a foretaste of what is in store during the entire week. The ablest men and women of the church will be here to participate in the meetings of the Presbytery, the Synod, the Centennial Exercises and the Woman's Missionary Work.

Nothing was more beautiful to the eye and called forth recollections mingling joy with sorrow, than the one hundred golden links, joining 1795 with 1895.

Wonderful Escapes.

On last Saturday morning a wagon and team were standing on Locust street and at the passing of a buggy the team became frightened and ran away. They ran up West Locust street striking the wagon of Mr. R. Wade, taking off a wheel and throwing Mr. Turley, who was in the wagon, out hitting him on the hip and bruising him very badly. The team left Locust street at Sycamore and running up Sycamore to Main turned, and running down Main toward the East, ran into the buggy of John J. Cox in front of Oldham Bros. & Co's, store breaking a shaft and singletree and frightening Mrs. Cox and daughter, who were in the buggy. They narrowly escaped injury. The team was caught on Broadway; no damages to horses or wagon.

Mrs. Kate O. Clark had a splendid opening at her millinery store Friday and Saturday. For the benefit of her lady customers she will have her display of beautiful styles open all this week. Call and see her.

Last week one of our representatives was in Louisville and called at the Falls City Manufacturing Co., manufacturers of the Leather Breeches Jeans Pants, also cassimere, kersey and corduroy overalls and jackets, with a message from Oldham Bros. & Co. Mr. Roney, one of the firm, insisted that our representative go with him through this establishment, which he did. They work 125 men, women and girls, run by electric power 52 sewing machines, one canvassing machine, 1 welt machine, 2 tacking machines, 1 button hole worker, 1 button machine, 4 patent button machines, and with the above machinery they turn out daily 700 pairs of breeches. They make a superior quality which cannot possibly rip. This is one of the busy firms of the city and is composed of practical men who have climbed up in the world by their own efforts. Mr. Roney is 38 years old, Mr. Fitcher 42 and Mr. Healine 29, and all of them are business from the word go.

Oldham Bros. & Co. handle their goods here exclusively, and are having a large trade, and have just received another large shipment.

Freeman displays splendid taste in the selection of fine solid silver goods. Call in and see what he has and how he sells the many beautiful things in his immense stock. 11-2t

Minstrels To-night.

Duncan Clark's company will positively appear at Opera House to-night. A pleasing entertainment guaranteed by the management.

W. P. Oldham & Co., are fitting up their hardware room in handsome style with the new patent hardware cartoons, oak finish, and will have as fine a business house as there is in the State. They are also adding largely to their stock of such lines as meet with the demands of the trade, and are offering them at prices as low as they can be sold anywhere. The fact is Mt. Sterling is able to compete with any city in the South, both in quality of goods and prices. Orders are promptly attended to and the same attention is given as if the person ordering were present.

This is one of our most reliable firms and the men at the head of it are thoroughly imbued with business principles, which means close buying, quick sales and a narrow selling margin.

comforting, helpful; and then, as one with a foretaste of the blissful eternity, he could tell of the rich blessing awaiting the people of God. It was an excellent sermon from a grand old man.

In the evening the audience room was filled, every seat being taken, to listen to Dr. John Worrall, of Danville, who preached from the third chapter of Peter, 10th and 21st verses. Mr. Worrall showed himself master of the subject in hand, and held the vast audience from the beginning to the finish. He is a man of broad reading, thoroughly posted in church history, and made his points well and clear.

Prof. Ed. Fogg, of Covington, assisted the orchestra to the delight of the audience. Prof. Nevill rendered a charming violin solo, and Miss Penelope Hendricks, of Flemingsburg, sister of Attorney General W. J. Hendricks, and niece of Mrs. W. F. Thompson and Mrs. Silas Stoffer, sang a beautiful solo, perfectly captivating the entire audience.

The entire of the two services were
